

1. How many classes are there overall?

Overall, there is a total of 5141 classes offered by the University of Chicago.

2. How many classes do you get if you put a fair attempt into de-duplicating them?

If you deduplicate the classes you get a total of 5021 classes, meaning there is a total of 120 repeated classes in the catalog. This would most likely mean that some are double-counted.

3. Which department offers the most (different) classes? Make a table, put it in a separate file.

The department that offers the greatest variety of classes is the romance languages and literature department. They have a total of 337 classes being offered.

4. Is there an apparent difference in the number of classes offered between Autumn, Winter, and Spring quarters?

Without relying in code and simply using control F there is 1377 classes offered in the winter term, 1580 offered on the fall, and 1618 offered in the spring. The rest are not specified. Thus, there is not a great difference, however, spring offers the most courses followed by autumn. Winter seems to offer the least amount for some reason.
